

Money Talk Tips

It's important to talk about money with a trusted parent or another trustworthy adult. These adults can help you make positive money choices. They also can help you avoid money mistakes.

What's important when you talk about money?

- You need to feel safe with the person you're talking to.
- You need to be honest about your feelings.
- You need to keep talking even when it gets hard.
- You need to be honest about how you use your money (even if you make mistakes).

Write the name of one or two adults who you trust to talk about money. People to consider: Your mom. Your dad. Your grandma. Your grandpa. Your aunt. Your uncle. Your adult brother. Your adult sister. Your teacher. Another adult you know and trust.
